With the novel, The Wren, The Wren, we return to Dublin. Anne Enright is the author of seven novels. Her 2007 novel, The Gathering, won the Booker Prize and was also named the Irish book of the year.

Discussion Guide

- What generational differences do you see in the three generations portrayed in The Wren, The Wren? What gender roles change? How does the language indicate some of these changes?
- Phil McDaragho is a celebrated poet but also an abuser. Can you celebrate the art, but not the artist?
- Consider how memory plays a part in the novel. Why do different characters remember different events differently?
